What do you mean by guided reading? The F & P version of guided reading is certainly the most known form, but it isn't the only one and when I speak to teachers about it they have different perceptions of what I'm saying. Guided reading these days is a veritable elephant to the blind — snake to one man, rope to another, wall to a third.

This blog is such a valuable tool it is front and center of my book marks—just behind attendance and the online plan book! I haven't taught guided reading since I was student teacher 10 years ago and even then, I never had to plan it! Small adjustments on schedule from the blog since I only get to teach reading 3 days a week, but an hour each day.

Have a look through our library of guided reading resources. For more details about how my classroom ran during guided reading sessions, please refer to our blog - 40 Activities and Ideas to Set up Literacy Groups in your Classroom. Do you have any favourite tips or tricks for making guided reading work in your classroom?

I linked your guided reading blog post to my post about top resources for starting up guided reading. Thank you so much for your fabulous insight into guided reading. Here is my blog: Apple Tree Learning Thanks! jen ☐

In my guided reading packet on TpT, I explain the planning steps of guided reading, but here's a tip that's not in my packet. When teaching a guided reading group, I always have a word work activity planned. To organize all of my games and ideas, I've put them all in a binder.

So a little while back I shared my guided reading toolbox with you. If you missed that post, click {here} or the picture below. It talks about some of the goodies I keep on hand to use during my guided reading lessons! Then a few weeks ago I was guest blogging over at the Hameray Publishing blog ...

Lots of people ask what I think about Guided Reading and how I do it so I am writing this blog. (for you really Mr Tidd!) I like guided reading - I have been teaching for 10 years. For 8 of those years I hated the process, I hated the amount of time it took me to plan, I hated how long it took me to mark and I found some of the activities ...

In 2013, my school made the move from carousel-style Guided Reading to teaching through whole-class lessons. I've blogged a huge amount about our rationale, reasons and resources so thought it was time to collate these blog posts together so they are easy to navigate.
