Postcolonial Studies: A Materialist Critique offers an enlightening and audacious study of colonialism and postcolonial theory. In this volume of new and reprinted essays, Parry moves away from the textualism predominant in postcolonial studies and concentrates on colonialism's sociomaterial conditions. She proposes an alternative reading and critical Writing of the disparate projects that seek to establish alternative protocols in disciplinary studies, Edward Said finds their common feature to be that all work out of a secular, marginal and oppositional consciousness, posit 'nothing less than new objects of knowledge . . . new theoretical models that upset or at the very least radically alter the prevailing paradigmatic norms', and are 'political and practical in as much as they intend . . . the end of dominating, coercive systems ...
